

LAW 7009: Computer Apps in Litigation

Recommended Prerequisite: Evidence (LAW 7024), but not required. This course teaches practical aspects of litigation strategy, emphasizing pretrial and courtroom-related technologies. The course will showcase litigation technology both in light of the problems it presents and the advantages it offers, and will provide students with hands-on use of computer technology in a simulated case. This course is not a computer programming, software training or law office management course. Students are expected to possess only basic word processing and electronic research skills. Prior completion of Evidence is suggested, but not required. Subject to change, grades are based upon a combination of class participation and a final presentation. This course is offered on an every other year basis. Exam Info: No Exam
